

YOU'VE ARRIVED

What follows is not a meal, not a drink,
but an evening composed with care.

Begin when ready.

THE WELCOME

Every great evening begins with intention.

You arrive not to rush, but to settle. To let the world outside fade while the one inside takes shape. The first moments matter. They set the rhythm for everything that follows.

Food is where we begin. Not as distraction, but as invitation. A way to ease into the evening, to awaken the palate, to gather your thoughts before the main journey ahead. Each dish is composed with care, designed to open rather than overwhelm, to prepare rather than satisfy completely.

This is the prelude. The conversation before the conversation. The moment when strangers become companions, when the day's edges soften, when you remember why you came.

Eat thoughtfully. Share generously. Let the flavours prime your senses for what awaits in the glass.

The whisky can wait. It has been waiting for years.

But first, we gather. We welcome the evening in.

THE RITUAL

Good whisky is never rushed.

The glass comes to you at room temperature, asking nothing but your attention. Hold it briefly. Let it warm in your palm. The spirit inside has waited years, sometimes decades, for this moment. It can wait another minute.

Bring the glass close, but not too close. Your nose hovers just above the rim, mouth slightly open. Breathe gently. The first impression is never the whole story. The second nosing reveals what the first concealed. The third, something else entirely.

When you taste, take only enough to coat your tongue. The first sip is a greeting, not a judgment. Your palate must acclimate to the strength, the complexity, the warmth. The second sip is where understanding begins. Move it slowly through your mouth. Let it reach every corner. Swallow, then breathe out through your nose. The finish will unfold in waves.

Silence is an ingredient.

Between sips, there should be space. Time to reflect. Time to let the whisky speak without interruption. Conversation, when it comes, flows naturally from this quietude. The best discussions are never forced.

Water is not weakness. A single drop can unlock hidden depths. Add it thoughtfully. There is no going back.

The last sip should feel earned.

You will know when the glass is finished, not by its emptiness, but by the completeness of the experience. Even then, return to the empty glass. Nose it again. What remains is the whisky's true signature, stripped of alcohol, honest and pure.

This is not about rules. This is about respect. For the craft. For the time. For yourself.

Now, choose well.

VALLEY OF THE DEER

In 1886, a man named William Grant possessed a vision so compelling that he gathered his seven sons, two daughters, and a single stonemason to build a distillery with their bare hands. Stone by stone, they constructed what would become an empire. On Christmas Day 1887, the first drop of spirit fell from their copper stills, a moment that would echo through generations.

The name itself speaks to the soul of Scotland: Glenfiddich, Gaelic for Valley of the Deer, where the River Fiddich winds through Speyside's most treasured terrain. When Prohibition strangled distilleries across Scotland, William's grandson boldly increased production, positioning the house to dominate when thirst returned. In 1963, they became the first to champion single malt beyond Scottish shores, introducing the world to what had been jealously guarded as Scotland's secret.

Today, Glenfiddich remains defiantly independent, still owned by the family that built it, still crafting the world's most awarded single malt. Their triangular bottle, a tribute to whisky's holy trinity of water, yeast, and malted barley, stands as an icon of innovation. Here is proof that vision, when paired with unwavering conviction, becomes legacy.

THE BALVENIE®

SINGLE MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

FIVE RARE CRAFTS

In 1892, William Grant looked across from his triumph at Glenfiddich and dreamed again. The Balvenie Distillery rose with an obsessive devotion to craft that would set it apart from every other distillery in Scotland.

This estate stands alone as the only distillery in the Scottish Highlands that maintains all five rare crafts of whisky making. They grow their own barley on Balvenie Mains, turn it by hand on traditional malting floors, maintain their uniquely shaped stills through generations of in-house coppersmiths, and sustain coopers on-site to nurture every cask used for The Balvenie. Here, the rhythm of creation is choreographed beyond a century, unhurried by modern demands.

David C. Stewart MBE, who began here at 17, spent over 60 years as Malt Master, pioneering the art of cask finishing with the legendary DoubleWood. His apprentice, Kelsey McKechnie, now carries forward that devotion, one of the youngest women to hold the title of Malt Master. The Balvenie's story is written not in marketing campaigns but in the steady hands of passionate craftsmen who understand that excellence cannot be rushed, only earned through patience and singular dedication.

SINGLE MALT

The Balvenie Caribbean Cask 14 Year Old 24 318

Caramel, tropical fruit, vanilla

Matured in traditional oak for 14 years, then finished in rum casks hand-selected by the Malt Master, creating a marriage of honey and caramel sweetness.

The Balvenie French Oak 16 Year Old 52 748

Honey, grapefruit, ginger

Aged in American oak before a rare finish in French oak Pineau casks, this expression delivers an energizing citrus character balanced with sweet floral notes and delicate spice.

The Balvenie PortWood 21 Year Old 62 948

Ripe raisin, honey, delicate fruits

After two decades in traditional oak, this whisky is transferred to aged port pipes for finishing. The result is a refined expression, creamy and silky with layers of fruit and gentle nuttiness.

RARE MARRIAGES

The Balvenie Twenty-Five Year Old 2288
"Rare Marriages"

Vanilla oak, toasted marshmallow, crystallised ginger

A masterful marriage of rare American and European oak casks aged for more than 25 years, then gently married together for months to deepen layers of flavour. Bold vanilla flavours give way to autumn fruits, honey and cinnamon-infused apple tart.

SCOTLAND UNBOUND

60 years ago, the Grant family began acquiring and curating rare whisky from Scotland's most remote corners, casks from distilleries long silent, spirits from regions wild and untamed. This private reserve, carefully guarded across decades, became the foundation for something audacious: Wildmoor.

Master Blender Brian Kinsman surveyed this treasure and envisioned not a single whisky, but an entire collection that would embody Scotland's raw majesty, not the gentle glens of postcards, but the dark moorlands, rugged coasts, and ancient mountains where nature still reigns supreme. Each expression draws from Highland and Speyside malts, Lowland grains, and whisky from ghost distilleries that exist now only in memory and these precious casks.

Wildmoor's bottles themselves tell the story, their surfaces rough with topographical relief, mapping the very terrain that shaped these spirits. This is Scotland unbound by region or convention, a flavour journey through landscapes where heather meets stone, where sea air tangles with smoke, where time itself seems to slow. In each glass lies the art of blending rare reserves, waiting for the moment to reveal Scotland's wildest character.

PREMIUM RESERVE COLLECTION

Wildmoor 23 Year Old Dark Moorland	42	598
Rich oak, deep vanilla, butterscotch
Drawn from ancient family reserves, this blend of Highland and Speyside malts marries with Lowland grain, finished in sherry casks to evoke the windswept winter moorlands with layers of stewed orchard fruit.

Wildmoor 30 Year Old Rugged Coast	-	1388
Bonfire smoke, sea salt, stone fruit
Inspired by Scotland's dramatic western coastline, this bold expression unites sherried Speyside malt with richly peated Island whisky, delivering waves of aromatic smoke balanced with vanilla sweetness and sherry spice.

THE MACALLAN

THE OAK OBSESSION

Since 1824, on the banks of the River Spey at Easter Elchies, The Macallan has pursued a singular obsession: perfection through oak. While others saw casks as mere vessels, The Macallan understood them as the soul of whisky itself. Up to 80% of their spirit's character flows from the wood that cradles it.

They travel to the forests of Northern Spain and America, hand selecting specific oak trees, overseeing every stage of cask production from felling through 18 months of sherry wine seasoning in Jerez. A five year process before the casks even reach Scotland. European and American oak, seasoned with sherry wine, become chambers where spirit slowly transforms into something approaching the divine. Each cask breathes the Highland air, giving its "Angel's Share" to the heavens.

In 1926, a single cask was filled that would wait 60 years before yielding just 40 bottles. One recently sold for over two million pounds, the most expensive whisky ever auctioned. Yet The Macallan's true luxury lies not in price but in unwavering commitment. Their new £140 million distillery, designed by Norman Foster, stands as a temple to tradition meeting vision. Here, patience is philosophy, and every drop carries the weight of nearly two centuries of devotion to craft.

DOUBLE CASK

The Macallan Double Cask 12 Year Old 22 268

Fudge, citrus, soft spice

A harmonious marriage of American and European sherry oak, delivering bright vanilla sweetness from American casks balanced with the rich spice and dried fruit character of European oak for a contemporary twist on classic Macallan.

The Macallan Double Cask 15 Year Old 38 498

Butterscotch, apple, spice

Three additional years reveal greater elegance and depth, where American oak imparts delicate vanilla while European oak delivers warming ginger and cinnamon, culminating in a perfectly balanced expression with layers of honey and crystallized ginger.

The Macallan Double Cask 18 Year Old 62 938

Toffee, sultana, orange

18 years of dual oak maturation creates a velvety experience, rich with dried fruits and vanilla, complemented by ginger spice and dark chocolate, delivering the sweet warmth and complexity that defines exceptional aged Macallan.

SHERRY OAK

The Macallan Sherry Oak 12 Year Old 24 328

Dried fruit, ginger, spice

Matured exclusively in hand-selected European sherry casks from Jerez, this expression embodies the classic Macallan character with rich sherry sweetness, dates, chocolate and subtle wood smoke in perfect harmony.

Dark chocolate, ginger, dates

Nearly two decades in sherry casks transforms this whisky into liquid luxury, offering intense notes of raisin, toffee, ginger and orange zest, with a silky texture and lingering finish that has made it a benchmark for aged single malts.

The Macallan Sherry Oak 25 Year Old - 6888

Raisin, crystallised ginger, rich oak

A quarter century of undisturbed maturation in sherry oak produces a rare masterpiece of extraordinary depth, where waves of dried fruit, cinnamon, chocolate orange and wood smoke converge in an intensely rich and complex symphony.

RARE CASK

The Macallan Rare Cask 968

Sweet raisin, vanilla, dark chocolate

Crafted from the rarest sherry seasoned oak casks with an exceptionally high proportion of first fill, this non-age statement expression delivers intense sweetness and complexity, its ruby mahogany hue testament to decades of patient maturation.

PURSUIT OF ELEGANCE

In 1879, a vision took hold: create not just whisky, but the world's most elegant whisky. A spirit lighter than the norm, refined rather than robust, designed to mature in a way entirely its own. For nearly 150 years, The Glenrothes has pursued this singular ambition with quiet devotion.

The secret lies beneath the ground. Four private springs flow from the Glenrothes Estate, their water filtered through volcanic bedrock formed millions of years ago. Gravity alone guides it down from the hills to the distillery, untouched by human intervention. Exceptionally soft and pure, this ancient water delivers the clean, light mouthfeel that defines every bottle, the foundation upon which elegance is built.

A small, dedicated team of lifelong whisky makers craft each batch with the precision of artisans who understand that some things cannot be rushed or replicated. Only a limited quantity is produced each year, not by choice of scarcity, but by commitment to quality. What matters is not how much, but how well.

The Glenrothes does not distill for the masses. It distills for those who recognise that elegance is not softness, but strength refined. Each vintage captures a specific moment in time, a particular season's character, a unique intersection of craft and circumstance. This is whisky as it was meant to be: patient, purposeful, and uncompromising in its pursuit of grace.

SINGLE MALT

The Glenrothes 15 Year Old	20	258
Dark chocolate, candied orange, cinnamon
A marriage of delicate and bold, this expression balances bright sweet spice with refined fruit complexity. Matured in predominantly first fill sherry seasoned casks, it delivers caramelised pears and baking spices wrapped in the warmth of honey and toasted oak.
The Glenrothes 18 Year Old	38	488
Butterscotch, orange, almond
Matured in sherry seasoned oak with a high proportion of first fill casks, this expression delivers rich intensity with notes of dark chocolate, ripe pear and ginger, culminating in a harmonious balance that showcases the distillery at its majestic peak.
The Glenrothes 25 Year Old	-	1788
Ripe peach, Swiss milk chocolate, sweet spice
A quarter century of patient maturation in high proportion first fill sherry casks creates a masterpiece of depth and elegance, where tropical fruit notes of mango and pineapple intertwine with vanilla, coriander seeds and salted caramel in a symphony worthy of its Chairman's Trophy.

HIGHLAND
ESTD PARK 1798
SINGLE MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

THE ORKNEY RULE

In 1798, Magnus Eunson had a problem and a solution. As Orkney's church beadle by day and whisky smuggler by night, he hid bottles beneath his pulpit, conducted services above his stash, and eventually decided legitimacy might be simpler. His distillery license made it official: Highland Park would do things its own way. Over two centuries later, nothing has changed.

Orkney is not Scotland. The wind here doesn't whisper, it roars. Trees struggle to take root in soil that refuses to be tamed. But every summer, the landscape erupts in purple heather, a plant so resilient it has thrived here for millennia. On Hobbister Moor, this heather grows deep into the peat, infusing it with an aromatic character found nowhere else on earth.

Highland Park is the only distillery in the world to use Orkney heathered peat. Not because others cannot, but because they are not here, on this wind-battered archipelago where tradition survives through sheer stubbornness. The peat is cut by hand, dried by that relentless wind, then used to smoke the barley in kilns that have stood for generations. The smoke it produces is subtle, floral, distinct. Not overwhelming fire, but delicate fragrance.

This is whisky made by islanders who never asked permission to break the rules, because they never followed them in the first place. Mansie's legacy lives in every bottle: defiant, distinct, and utterly Orcadian. Some call it craft. Here, they call it survival.

SINGLE MALT

Highland Park 12 Year Old 20 228

Heather honey, citrus, light smoke

The benchmark Orkney malt, matured in sherry-seasoned European and American oak casks. A harmonious balance of floral honey sweetness, dried fruits and gentle heathery peat smoke, revealing the distillery's signature character in perfect equilibrium.

Highland Park 15 Year Old 22 288

Honey-glazed pineapple, vanilla, toasted cinnamon

Crafted from first-fill sherry-seasoned casks with a touch of refill oak for balance, this vibrant expression delivers tropical fruit intensity alongside warm spice. Lemon zest and heathered peat smoke weave through layers of rich vanilla and honeyed sweetness.

Highland Park 18 Year Old 38 488

Dried fruit, smoky honey, oak spice

After maturing in sherry-seasoned European and American oak casks for 18 years, this whisky reveals exceptional depth and sophistication. Layers of rich toffee, baked cherries, and vibrant orange zest are beautifully balanced by a hint of black pepper spice and a whisper of lingering smoke. This is Highland Park at its most elegant and complex.

THE PARTING GLASS

Good company, like good whisky, knows when to finish.

There is an art to leaving well. Not too early, when the conversation still holds weight. Not too late, when the glass has been emptied and refilled past meaning. Somewhere between, there exists a perfect moment. You will feel it before you see it.

The last pour has been savoured. The final bite taken. What remains is not hunger or thirst, but satisfaction. Completeness. The kind that comes only from time well spent, from attention fully given.

Stand slowly. The ritual of departure matters as much as arrival. Thank those who served. Acknowledge those who shared the evening. These small courtesies are not antiquated. They are timeless.

As you leave, carry something with you. Not just the warmth of the whisky, but the memory of this pause in time. The taste will fade by morning. The moment should not.

The door closes behind you. The night waits outside. And somewhere, in a quiet corner of your mind, the echo of good whisky and good company lingers.

This is how an evening should end. Not with noise, but with quiet satisfaction.

Until next time, the glass awaits.
